Bing Concert Hall	Opening Ceremony
Bing Concert Hall OPENING PERFORMANCE	un still - dance, photography and the movement of time	Hugo Glendinning	7 - 8:30PM
	Photographer and filmmaker Hugo Glendinning creates a big-screen projected photo-work with newly commissioned music by John Avery (long time collaborator with Forced Entertainment and Wendy Houstoun), in a project curated by Noémie Solomon (McGill University Montréal). Glendinning's work draws on 30 years of photographing dance and performance, while also including work from throughout his archive. John Avery's music both leads and follows the imagery in a series of long leaning notes that float, and are held, at once in motion and waiting to move. Supported by the British Council, USA.
Bing Concert Hall OPENING PERFORMANCE	The Symphonic Body	Ann Carlson	7 - 8:30PM
	The Symphonic Body is a performance made entirely from gestures. It is a movement based orchestral work performed by people from across the Stanford University campus. Instead of instruments, individuals in this orchestra perform gestural portraits based on the motions of their workday. These portraits are individual dances, custom made for each person, choreographed from the movements they already do. The particular choreographed gestures themselves become part of a larger movement tapestry within each performer and within the piece as a whole. By engaging with this performance practice members of the Stanford community come together in concert to expand, renew and re-experience the artistry embedded in the everyday.
